WHAT DOES CABLES WYND HOUSE MEAN TO YOU?

A research project looking at the places that matter to people and why

This is a collaborative project funded by:

The Research

My name is Elizabeth Robson and I am a PhD student at the University of Stirling. I am interested in how historic places are valued by people today.

In my research, I am looking at a variety of historic places across Scotland and asking: what do they mean to the people who live in, visit, or have a personal connection to them?

One of the sites I am looking at is Cables Wynd House and I am keen to hear from you.

It is easy to get involved, just complete the short questionnaire overleaf.

Responses will contribute to a site-specific report on the values associated with Cables Wynd House, which will be publically available. The research findings will also inform the development of my PhD thesis and resulting academic and professional publications.

Who can get involved?

All current residents of Cables Wynd House are invited to participate.

I am interested to hear from you! Whether you are a long-time resident or recently moved to the area; a student, parent, worker, or retired.

Additional copies of the questionnaire are available from the Concierge's office, as are large print versions. There is no limit on the number of responses per household but please only submit one form per person.

If you would like to participate but are unable to complete a written questionnaire, please contact me and we will make alternative arrangements to gather your responses.

Your responses will be kept anonymous and you will not be named in the site report or any resulting publications. If you change your mind about participating, you can withdraw at any time by contacting me.
